Carlson was given thirty days in jail and Spence was fined $15. Carlson had no sooner been placed in jail than he began breaking up the furniture and breaking the window lights. He tipped the stove over and so much smoke developed it looked as if the jail was on fire. A complaint has been made charging him with a felony for the latter disturbance and in all probability he will be dealt with more severely when he comes before the district court for a trial.

POULTRYMEN OF THE STATE ORGANIZE

Ogden, Feb. 19.—A constitution and bylaws for the formation of the State Poultry association of Utah, which is to be incorporated under the laws of the state of Utah, were framed last night at the Commercial club in Salt Lake by the executive committees of the Salt Lake and Ogden poultry associations.

The purpose of the proposed state organization is clearly defined in an article of the constitution framed by the committees, as follows:

"The intention of this incorporation shall be the encouragement of all interests and the promotion of improvements in the breeding, management and development of poultry by means of exhibitions, and the collection and distribution of reliable and practical information relative to utility breeds of poultry."

Aside from this the future state organization will comprehend any and all steps that may be calculated to protect the poultry industry and foster its growth, development and worth as one of the most important industries of this state.

The constitution and bylaws framed last night will be reported by the executive committees to the memberships of their respective organizations. If the reports are accepted and approved, invitations will be sent to poultrymen in all corners of the state, asking them to attend a mass meeting of poultrymen in this city for the purpose of incorporating as a state organization.

Those present last night were A. P. Stone, who presided; H. R. Grow, T. H. Cartwright, C. Betts, C. J. Trump and E. E. Smith of the Salt Lake association; W. L. Bramwell, W. W. Browning, J. A. Stimson and Walter Richey of the Ogden association.

The Lyric
The program consists of four full reels, four stories by four different companies. The variety is most pleasing, and the entertainment with a single disappointment.

Conference Sales

Cut-price piano houses at Salt Lake figure on conference bargain sales just like hunters look forward to the duck season to open Oct. 1st. We claim that no customer ever got a bargain on a new piano at one of these sales. Our firm has never advertised a cut price on new pianos in twenty-four years. Why? The answer is easy. A good piano marked at the right price, will always bring that price.

A cut price dealer values an agent more for his ability in handling a customer than his real knowledge of a piano. An agent's commission is usually figured on a basis of 20 per cent. You pay this extra when you buy of an agent.

Prize guessing contests are fakes, sales, pure and simple and do not mean anything to a customer. Some Governors of eastern states have stopped these sales. Why not do it in our State? We can furnish the proof if customers will call.

Cut price agents and dealers are responsible for the high prices marked on their pianos. This accounts for so many $400, $500, and $600 pianos in our county and state. These prices can usually be cut in half, and then leave a good profit to them.

Several hundred different kinds of pianos are made in America. About 20 of these are known as high grades. You can buy these high grades for $325.00 to $400.00 but you should know absolutely that you are getting one of these pianos.

Some agents carry a book called a guide, claiming it is an authority on piano grades. These guides are not authority and for the proof we refer you to trade papers, also reliable piano factories in the U. S.

Stencel pianos are known as pianos that have no factory as one dealer puts it: "A piano without a mother." They have very little real value. There are several hundred in Cache county today.

A musician is usually attracted by the tone of any new piano hence will recommend them. The fact of the matter is that even the most competent artists are not posted as to whether or not a piano will keep its tone for years to come. The honest dealer after all is the sole judge. If you were going to buy a diamond would you go to one who claimed to know or would you go to a dealer who did know something about the real value and one whom you had confidence in?

Allowing an agent to place a piano in your home for a few days trial has the same effect as the giving of passes on railroads. You feel more or less obligated to them, which prevents you from using your free agency to investigate other makes and other dealers pianos.

When piano dealers adopt the "one price plan" the factories will quit making stencil pianos; agents will give up canvassing; guessing contests and bargain sales will be a thing of the past. Pianos like hundreds of other staple articles will be sold on their merits. The most reliable and the largest music dealers in the world are following the one price plan.

We will meet eastern prices on pianos or phonographs and we will save you the freight.

MAKE SUGAR BEET CONTRACTS

Farmers and Amalgamated Sugar Company Getting Together on 1913 Crop of Beets

The Amalgamated Sugar company is now ready to make sugar beet contracts for the year 1913. Most of the farmers have raised sugar beets for 12 to 15 years, and the methods of cultivating and manner of growing the crop are not new to them. The crop is sold when the contract is made, and there is no question in the growers' mind as to whether or not there will be a market for his crop or what he will get for it. Beets is a hardy crop, and there is but little danger of their being injured by frost. Many beet growers say that the beet crop is their best help.

The price of beets this year will be the same as it was last year, notwithstanding the fact that the tariff agitation is still on, and from all appearances, the sugar company will not be able to sell its product after this year for as much as it has done heretofore.

The season is advancing and by this time every farmer should have determined as to what crop he will grow. Those who sow may expect to reap. Now is the time to get ready for the sowing for spring will soon be here.

The field superintendent of the Logan Sugar Factory will be in the company's office, room 12 in the Commercial block over the Co-op Drug store in Logan each day of this month, so that all farmers coming to the city during that time may call and make their contracts.
